O, know ye where they slumber No monument appears, For freedom's pilgrims to draw nigh, And hallow with their tears? Or were in works of glory Done in the olden time?

Go ask yon shining river,
And it will tell a tole
Of noble deeds of daring,
Will make thy cheek grow pale
Go ask yon smiling valley,
Whose harvests bloom so fair,
'Twill tell thee a sad story
Of the brave who slumber there: Go ask you mountain, rearing
Its forest crest so high;
Each tree upon its summit

They knew no dread of danger, When rose the Indian's yell;

Has seen a warrior die.

Each tree upon its sums

Right gallantly they struggled, Right gallantly they feli; From Alleghany's summit, To the farthest western shore, These brave men's bones are lying Where they perished in their gare; And not a single monument Is seen in all the land,

In honor of the memory Of that heroic band. Their bones were left to whiten The spot where they were slain; And were ye now to seek them, They would be sought in vain. The mountain cat has feasted Upon them is they lay; Long, long ago they mingled, Again with other clay; Their very names are dying, Unconsecrate by fame, In oblivion they slumber, Our glory and our shame.

If It was a beautiful observation of the late Wm. Hazlit, that "there is room enough in human life to crowd almost every art and science in it. If we pass no day without a line' -- visit no place without the company of a book, may with ease fill libraries, or empty them of their contents. The more we do, the more we can do the more busy we are, the more leisure we have."

An Irishman, who had been reduced to a mere shadow by a severe illness, was asked by his physician what he thought of the future state. "Ah doctor," was the answer, "it makes

We wand a great reform in political parties. What a violent, unreasonable, and dishonest spirit is exhibited by so many party publications! Low, vulgar, offensive epithets are freely spread over these partizan sheets, which are circulated as "family Land Titles in all the Courts of Linn and adjacent counties. Particular attention given to securing and collecting Claims, buying and selling Land, paying Taxes, and investigating Land Titles in all the counties in Northern Missouri. newspapers," and the young and risng generation are regaled weekly with scandalous vituperations and indecent epithets.

The first experiment on this continent of lighting a city with gas made from peat, was tried in Portland, Me., a short time since. The light was clear and brilliant, and few of the citizens were aware that coal was not used as usual.

Influence of Railroads.

'Give me the county that goes for her own interests,' said an old Kentuckian who was traveling up the Missouri river not long since, 'I have traveled in most every State in the Union' he continues, 'I have been in cities and counties where elections were held to subscribe to the stock of railroads by such county, and it came to pass that it was rejected, and now that county is one among the lowest; no more to be though of or looked upon as a county. But, I have been in cities and counties where they voted most unanimously for the railroad, and now stand ahead of all others in population, wealth, commerce and trade, and in most everything that is now on the American shores. It mainly depends on the citizens of the county to do their duty.'

Trees in being transplanted, to do well, must be taken up with care, with all the roots possible. These should not be exposed to the sun, wind or frost. The ground in which they are to be planted, should be deeply plowed-large holes dug to receive the trees, which must not be planted quite as deep as they stood in the Nursery, as the ground will afterward settle. No grain crops should be cultivated around them-but root crops are most suitable, as the hoeing of them will aid in keeping the ground mellow about the trees.

A New Hampshire correspondent of the Boston Traveler tells a story of the discovery of lead, copper, and silver mines in that State, near the town of Warren. The lead vein is said to be 800 feet long and 7 feet Wide Copper and silver are said to exist in ensiderable quantities.
